BLUE JAYS MANAGER JOHN GIBBONS:

On what he saw today from Marco Estrada that he didn't have in his last couple outings:

"I think most of it goes back to that he's been out a while. I don't know how many weeks he has missed, and then not pitching through that. Plus I think you get a nice, energetic crowd and even though you're on the road, that's got to help. He didn't have that in Oakland the other night. Really, in Oakland the other night it was almost like a rehab start in a lot of ways. We needed him to pitch. It was vintage Marco, really painting the fastball. He threw some good curveballs, not a lot of them, but some really good ones that bucked some guys. Then, of course the good changeup. It always helps too, these guys aren't as familiar with him as the guys in the AL East that see him all the time, but when he's on, it really doesn't matter. He can shut down anybody."

On Russell Martin's status after taking a ball off his knee:

"Oh yeah, he got it pretty good. He and Luke are probably the only two on the field that wouldn't have been rolling around on the ground for about 20 minutes. So yeah, he wouldn't have come out if we tried to take him out. I think he'll be a little sore tomorrow, but we've got an off day Monday too, and then hopefully it's not something that sticks with him because that's their livelihood on the knee. They've got to squat and do all that."
