Monday's top prospect performers

William Boor | MLB.com | August 27, 2018

• No. 77 overall prospect Brusdar Graterol (Twins' No. 4) put together his third scoreless outing of the season and his first with Class A Advanced Fort Myers. Graterol cruised through the first two innings, retiring six of the first seven batters he faced and didn't allow a runner to reach second base until surrendering a one-out double in the sixth. Graterol got the next batter to lineout and then was lifted after 5 2/3 scoreless innings. The 20-year-old threw 88 pitches (59 strikes) and struck out six while walking one in the outing.

Huge season helping Twins prospect Alex Kirilloff make up for lost time

Jake Depue | ESPN 1500 | August 27, 2018

Less than a year after being drafted in the first round and putting together a solid debut season in professional baseball, Alex Kirilloff was on the sidelines.

Tommy John surgery—a relative rarity for position players—forced Kirilloff to miss the entire 2017 season, which would have been his first full season in the minors, and a critical one in his development. While Royce Lewis, Brent Rooker and others were making immediate impacts in the minors, Kirilloff was rehabbing, away from the field.

Although he may have been a bit of a forgotten man last season, he's making sure everyone knows his name this year.

The lefty masher has put up the best offensive season of any player in the Twins organization, skyrocketing up prospect rankings in the process. Unranked to start the season, he's now MLB.com's No. 30 overall prospect, and ranks second in Minnesota's organization, behind only his teammate and friend, Royce Lewis.

On the season, Kirilloff's hitting .348/.390/.576 with 18 home runs, 43 doubles, and 7 triples between Cedar Rapids and Fort Myers. His power from the left side and low strikeout rate is reminiscent of a player he admires, Reds first baseman Joey Votto. As gaudy as the numbers are, he says the results are secondary to returning successfully from the surgery.

"My biggest goal was to get through a full season healthy," he said. "Wherever that took me, I was happy to play ball again. I'm not a huge results-oriented guy. I'm a big proponent of showing up to the field every day playing hard, and whatever the result is, that's what it is. So for me, to have the results I've had this year has been great, but I'm just happy to be playing healthy again."

Kirilloff is the complete package offensively. He hits for average and power, and can go gap to gap in the outfield. He lets the ball travel deep prior to making contact, rather than jumping out front, which has helped him rack up a number of hits to the opposite field. The ability to have a swing that isn't pull-heavy may prevent teams from shifting him to the degree many left-handed sluggers are currently getting shifted, with teams stockpiling fielders on the right side. Sluggers like Joey Gallo, Bryce Harper and Minnesota's Logan Morrison have seen their average plummet in part due to shifts.

Like Lewis, Kirilloff has a leg kick, though it's not as pronounced as Lewis's. He says the leg kick is more for timing than generating power, and that he's comfortable with his mechanics and the results they've produced. He rarely looks to make changes to his swing, though he does use video occasionally when he's in a slump.

"I'm more focused on timing, making adjustments in those categories rather than mechanics," he said of his swing analysis. "If I'm having a stretch of games where I don't feel like myself at the plate, I'll usually go back to video to see what I'm doing currently and compare it to what I was doing before when I was hitting well. But I'm not really the guy you'll find in the video room every day looking at at-bats, it's more to make adjustments."

Kirilloff and Lewis seem to view the game similarly in their "old school" approach to hitting. Both watch a lot of baseball, but rely more on feel offensively than video analysis and analytics.

"I don't really follow that stuff," Kirilloff said of metrics like launch angle and exit velocity. "Obviously if you're hitting pretty well, those things will be there, so I don't really worry about it."

He's hitting very well. Kirilloff leads the Florida State League in average, and ranks in the top five in slugging and OPS. His strikeout rate of 14.8% is low for a power hitter. And he's doing all of it in his age-20 season, as one of the youngest regulars in the FSL. It's still early, but offensively he projects as a potential middle-of-the order bat in the big leagues.

Defensively, he's played exclusively right field this season. The Twins have several highly ranked corner OF/1B in their system, including Trevor Larnach and Brent Rooker. Although all three figure to hit their way to the majors, the ability to provide plus defense adds a lot of value for any player. Kirilloff, whose arm strength has returned following Tommy John, is prioritizing his defensive development.

"I think I've come a long way defensively this year," he said. "Getting routes and reads off the bat and making better decisions on plays in the outfield. There's always room for improvement. I look forward to continuing to improve this season and in the offseason, getting better foot speed, angles, [reads] off the bat. I think I can definitely still come a long way."

Along with Lewis, Brusdar Graterol and others, Twins fans see Kirilloff as part of a future wave of talent that could change the course of the franchise. Their play so far warrants those sorts of lofty hopes. Kirilloff is focused on the present, but seems to embrace the expectations.

"It's pretty cool to think about and get the compliments that something like that could be happening," he said. "We definitely would like it to be. I'm sure I can speak for [Royce] when I say we'd love to make it to the big leagues and bring a championship to Minnesota one day."

Lookouts win 4-1 over Jumbo Shrimp Staff Report | Times Free Press | August 27, 2018

Andy Wilkins went 1-for-2 with two walks and a solo home run and Jimmy Kerrigan and Brent Rooker had RBI doubles as the Chattanooga Lookouts beat Jacksonville 4-1 Monday night in Southern League baseball at AT&T Field.

Chattanooga's final home game of the season will be tonight at 7:15 against the same Jumbo Shrimp. The Lookouts are 63-68 overall.

Jacksonville (52-78) managed nine hits against four pitchers — the Lookouts totaled six — but did not score until the ninth inning, on back-to-back doubles by Monte Harrison and Bryson Brigman. Omar Bencomo (8-6) pitched the third through seventh innings in relief of Casey Crosby and got the win with four strikeouts and five hits allowed, and Cody Stashak followed Devin Smeltzer with the last two outs for his fourth save.

Chattanooga scored two runs in the second inning, including Wilkins' one-out homer and Kerrigan's two-out double following a Jordan Gore single, and again in the seventh. Luke Raley led off that at-bat by being hit by a pitch, and Rooker doubled home and eventually scored on a two-out wild pitch with Wilkins at the plate.

Cedar Rapids Kernels clinch sixth consecutive Midwest League playoff berth Jeff Johnson | The Gazette | August 27, 2018

CEDAR RAPIDS — They've been playing professional baseball in this town since the late 1800s. That's a long, long time.

The club record for most consecutive appearances in a league playoff is five. Oops, make that six now.

Or every single year the Minnesota Twins have been the parent major league club.

The Cedar Rapids Kernels earned a Midwest League postseason spot Monday night with a 5-1 win over Kane County at Veterans Memorial Stadium. The victory also cinched the top second-half seed in the Western Division.

That's important because Cedar Rapids will have home-field advantage in the best-of-3 division semifinals next week. The series likely will be Game 1 on the road, Wednesday, Sept. 5, with home games the following two nights, if needed.

The opponent has yet to be determined, but will be either Kane County, Wisconsin or Beloit. Those three teams will fight it out over their last six regular-season games.

The Kernels can rest position regulars if need be, set up a playoff pitching rotation and try and stay as sharp as they've been this past week.

Monday's win was the club's eighth in nine games.

"This is what you look for all year," said Kernels Manager Toby Gardenhire. "You want the guys to get better, that's the main thing. But winning is a part of that. Our staff, our whole staff, has worked really, really hard to get these guys going. This is a credit to our staff and how hard it worked and how hard the players have worked during the season."

"It does something to you to win," said Ben Rodriguez of the Kernels. "Everyone here wants to do well in their career and things like that, but the game gets a lot more fun when you win and you come together as a team. Especially now, the dog days of July and August, it's tough. But when you come down to the end, and you're playing meaningful baseball, there's nothing better than that."

Quite appropriate that the playoff clincher came with the aid of a couple of guys who have been here all season. Starting pitcher Randy Dobnak is an independent ball refugee who has been consistent all summer, this his 10th victory.

Dobnak went seven innings, allowing just one hit and no runs until laboring in the seventh. That was when Kane County got its run, though the right-hander, who dropped his earned run average to 3.12, made a nice fielding play of a slow chopper to his right to strand two Cougars in scoring position.

"I treat every game the same," Dobnak said. "I go out there, try and go six or seven innings and give my team a chance to win. But I think pitching the game that gets us to the playoffs is pretty special."

Rodriguez, who actually spent a week or so at high-Class A Fort Myers before coming back down, had a leadoff double in the second inning and scored the game's first run later on a Jacob Pearson RBI single. Newcomers Michael Davis and Victor Tademio hit back-to-back home runs in the fifth to create spread.

Davis was the dude who replaced Royce Lewis at shortstop when the first-overall draft pick of 2017 was promoted to Fort Myers in July, adding a two-run single later in the game. Third baseman Tademio was playing his first game as a Kernel, as he came up Sunday from Rookie ball to replace the concussed Andrew Bechtold on the active roster.

The Kernels improved to a season-best 13 games over .500 (73-60) with this win. They are 41-23 in the second half, which is tops in the entire league. It's good to be peaking this time of year.

"In the clubhouse, I think everyone gets along," Dobnak said. "Nobody really hates each other, we love each other, we have that chemistry. That brotherhood, that energy from the inside can really translate out onto the field."
